

Analytical Technical Training Seminar & World Economic Conference (2 Separate Days)

Due to the overwhelming requests for a Analytical Technical Training Seminar, I will hold a full one-day session in Philadelphia on December 3rd and the following day December 4th a global forecasting session. The price for the entire weekend will be $2500, and those who just wish to attend the second day that price will be $750. (Prices include luncheon)

The format will be Classroom Style, not auditorium. In this manner, we can limit the attendance to ensure that we achieve a working group environment. The audience will be encouraged to participate asking questions to further the learning experience for one and all.

The Analytical Technical Training Seminar will include a DVD of the session and the manuals.

World Economic Conference

Day Two

Day TWO will be the World Economic Conference. This will cover the global economy and who should be doing what, when, and where. Materials will be provided of the all charts and forecasts for attendees to enable you to get acquainted with looking at the world economy in a far more dynamic manner and to retain references for the upcoming year. There will be an introductory discussion of the Forecasting Arrays that will be provided for all markets.

We will look at the commodities, world share markets, currencies, bond markets, and political forecasting for the different regions. We will also look at the prospects for the world AFTER the collapse of Europe and how that Economic Tsunami will swamp most of the global economy in 2012.

This may be the most important such conference ever held since we now stand on the precipice of what the computer models have been projecting since 1985.

We will review ALL Yearly Models and provide specific numbers for year-end closings in each market around the world.

This will be a full working day session – 8 hours. So be prepared. This is no 20 minute speech. This is for serious people looking for real answers without the hype.

Each Day there will be a Luncheon

Reservations are required: Please email

ArmstrongEconomics@Hotmail.COM